The Canadian Canoe Museum

Holding Don's Starkell's Orellana, Herb Pohl's experienced red-and-white Femat, and a host of memorabilia from other legendary canoe trippers like Victoria Jason, Pierre Trudeau, Tory Fraser, Eric Morse and others, The Canadian Canoe Museum is the only museum dedicated to preserving and communicating the craft, the building techniques, the people and the stories of Canada's paddling history. Built around a collection of 600+ canoes, kayaks, and self-propelled craft—the world's largest—the museum has been actively working to spread the word across Canada and around the world (you may remember the CCM crew on the Thames last June for the Queen's Diamond Jubilee Flotilla) but it has also just embarked on a feasibility study to begin the process of moving the whole operation to the water in downtown Peterborough, hopefully in conjunction with Canada's Sesquicentennial, which is happening on July 1st, 2017. With new benefits, including a special member's only website with lots of cool content, the museum has doubled its membership in the last year, in an effort to illustrate to governments and other prospective partners that Canadians care about their canoes. By bringing the CCM and the WCA a little closer together, we'd love to add your name to that list in the hope that within the year we'll convince you to become a long term member and supporter of the museum.
